

First Trip To The Dentist

The American Dental Association generally recommends that children first visit the dentist within 6 months of their first tooth coming in and no later than age 3. Baby teeth are important because they allow your child to eat properly, allow for jaw growth, give the face its form and appearance, assist in the formation of proper speech, and most importantly act as "space savers" for adult teeth.

We want your child to be comfortable in the dental office. Good dental habits, formed early in life set the stage for great dental habits as your child grows. In fact, dental health for children is so important that we are giving your child a first visit for FREE!!!
